'Tis thine the wounded soul to heal
'That hopeless bleeds for sorrow's smart:
From stern misfortunes' shaft to steal
The barb that rankles in the heart.

What though with thes the roses fly, And jocund youth's gay reign is o'er; Though dimmed the lustre of the eye, And hope's vain dreams enchant no more. Yet in thy train come soft-eyed peace, Indifference with her heart of snow; At her seid touch, lo! sorrows cease, No thorn beneath her roses grow.

Oh haste to grant the suppliant's prayer, To me thy torpid calm lupart; Rend from my brow youth's garland fair, But take the thorn that's in my heart.

Ah, why do fabling poets tell That thy flest wings outstrip the wind! Why feign thy course of joy the knell, And call thy slowest pace unkind?

To me thy tedious feeble pace Comes laden with the weight of years— With sighs I view morn's blushing face, And hall mild evening with my trans.

LEOLA;

THE MYSTERIOUS RANGER.

A Tale of the Mexican War.

B. T. Hamilton Vananda. Author of "Allela," " The Miller Patriot," "Wild Hermit," "Almoni," "Jessie Wharton," etc.

"Mariana!" she exclaimed, as she returned her embrace. "You have answered my sum-

"How could I stay away, my dear mistress," exclaimed the girl, "when I knew that you had come back; especially when Vito informed me you were in danger?"

"Vito has told you al! then?"

"Everything. What can I do for you?" "First go out into the city, and ascertain where the Texan Rangers or Tejanos are quartered. You understand English well enough to find out by inquiring of the American soldiers. When you have found them, inquire for Lieutenant Jules Travis, and give him this letter." "This I can do," said Mariara. "How fortunate, kind mistress, that you taught me to speak the Americano."

"It is indeed. Go, now, and return as soon as you have performed the mission." Marians bastened out, and Leola once more threw herself upon her couch, lest her hostess might enter and discover her ruse. Long and patiently she awaited the maiden's return; but hour after hour elapsed and still she came not. At last, just at dusk, and when Leola was almost overcome with anxiety, she entered her apartment. "Why did you stay so long? Have you seen him?" cried Leola, anxiously.

"Alas! Senora, no," sighed Mariana, holding up the letter. "His company is quartered in your father's palace, but he has not been there nce morning, and one of the men told me that he was absent from the city, and would probably not be back to-night."

Leola uttered a groan, and fell back on her pillow. Now, indeed, was she friendless! The hore which had supported her all day, had been suddenly snatched from her, for she believed if she could have seen Travis in the evening, so as to tell him all, he would have immediately taken some measures for her safety.

Mariana tried to console her as well as she could, but all looked dark and gloomy to our heroine, who could see no glimmer of home through the surrounding gloom.

rians was sent forth in search of our hero. "He bas a friend Mariana," she said, "a tall Kit Galen. If you cannot find Travis, give the letter to his friend, and charge him to deliver it at the earliest opportunity." Mariana returned in an bour with a brighter countenance. She had found the tall Texian, with whom she seemed much pleased, and who promised to deliver the letter to Travis during the

This was cheering news to Leo'a, and again the fire of hope was kindled in her heart. At this moment Vito entered.

"The Senorita wants to know if the Senora is well enough to come down this morning," she down presently," replied Leela, cheerfully.

"Why do you tell stories, and try to cheat Vito?" asked the girl, fixing her great black eyes upon her. "You are not well; your eyes are red, and your cheeks haggard; you have slept none all night. Tell me, have you heard from the young Americano?" "Yes, Vito."

"Then you may come down; hut you mustn't be surprised if she sends you to the convent be-

"So soon!" exclaimed Leols, aghast.

"I don't know; but the Senorita has commerce ed to blind my eyes, and talks of going to Vera Cruz, to-morrow; and I know that is only the prelude to sending you away." And Vito whisked out of the room, as though she had delivered the most agreeable information in the world,

By the assistance of Mariana, Leola was soon dressed, and she took unusual pains with her toilet, to conceal her haggard and distressed looks. When she descended to the breakfast room, her hostess mot her with a welcome smile, and congratulated her upon her recovery. Leola however, was not long in discovering a peculiar nervousness in her manner, as if she wished to accomplish something that was equally disagree-

CHPPTER VII. THE ABDUCTION,-THE ROAD TO CAMARGO,

THE FIGHT.—THE PRISONERS.

Every body who knows anything of the tactics of war [is aware, that though the infantry and foot soldiers suffer the greatest brunt and fatigue of battle, yet the cavalry and dragoons have by far the worst of it between the actions, in the way of foraging, escorting provisions, re-connoitering, etc. When Gereral Taylor enter-ed Matamoras, as conqueror, he was placed in a position far from enviable, as regards the provisioning of his four or five thousand troops, who were in a new climate, subject to virulent diseases; as d it was essentially necessary that they should be properly victualed, or the most disastrous consequences must ensue. As the capture of Matamoras followed rapidly after the victories of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma (valley of Palms) his baggage and provisions, with many trophics of war, had necessarily got behindhand, and the first and most important consideration in establishing his camp, was to bring them up. To do this, on account of the numerous guerilla organizations of the country, It was necessary that each train should have a strong escort, and none were so well acquainted with the duties, or so efficient in repelling these sort of attacks as the Texan Rangers. This will readily account for the absence of Lieutenant Travis, with a portion of his corps, from the Jules had received the order to fall back to the istance of some provision trains, with a heavy heart. His mind was filled with Leels, and the dangers which threatened her; he remembered he oath he had taken the night previously to protect her from her foof, and he feared that evil might befall her during his absence. But a sol-dier's first duty is to obey his commander, and there was no alternative for poor Travis, but to mount his horse, and, at the head of his com-mand, ride forth over the burning plain to do

It was midnight of the second day ere he re turned to his quarters, which had been made in the palace of Senor Violenta. All save the guard were asleep, and, wearied and fatigued as he was, from extraordinary duty, he sought his couch, and was soon in the land of dreams, which seemed peopled only with the beautiful Senora

He was awakened at sunrise-not by the reveille, but by a strong hand shaking his shoulder, and a soft voice, saying-

"I don't like to awaken, you, Lieutenant, but I kinder think it's important, I reckon. By hookey! If I didn't think the 'sarned g'rillers had "Ah, Kit, is it you?" said Travis, tubbing his eyes, and trying to rouse himself. "Wal, I rather guess it is me, I reckon," said Kit Galen. "What time did you git back?" "At midnight; and I was so weary that I have slept late."

"Not a bit on't. The sun's jest up, and the revaleer aint beat yet. But yere; yere's suthin what was gin to me yesterday mornin' to gin to you, an' I thought it mought be important, considerin' who I 'magined it was from!"

"Ah! who gave you this?" exclaimed Francis, siezing a letter from his hands, and examining the delicate superscription.

"Wal, it was a rather smartish lookin' Mexican gal, I reckon. She wasn't as delicate an' hansome as the Senora Leola, but she sort o' suited my fancy. I take it, she must be her waitin maid, I reckon; for she seemed mighty anxious for you to hev the letter, and she knowed my name as pat as she did your'n, so there must her been some conferdence atween 'em. Carlton told me she was yere agin last night, but I was in the pickets, and didn't see her, though I wish to gracious I had for she's a moughty pooty gal, for a greaser, I reckon. But what's the matter? You shake like an aspen?"

While Kit was indulging in his colloquial pro pensities. Travis had opened and read the note which we have seen Leola write. A dark presentiment fell upon his heart, as he exclaimed: "Great Heavens! this note was written two days ago! she was then surronded by wily foes who were plotting her ruin. Where may she be now ?"

on ?" said Kit. "Yes, by Heaven! there will be war to the death between me and these designing villains!' he exclaimed, starting to his feet. "Kit, prepare your small arms-secret them about your person-and follow me." "I'll be with yer in a minit, I reckon," said the faithful ranger. By the time Travis had completed his toilet.

"What's up? Goin' to be a rumpus, ! reck

Kit was again by his side, and they set out at "Which way?" asked the ranger.

"To the Church di San Juan!" was the stern Travis walked fast, for he was terribly excited, and Kit's long legs were put to their utmost alacrity to keep up with his quick-footed companion. The plaza in which stood the Church di San Juan was soon gained, when, just as they turned the corner, their ears were saluted with solemn sounds of the organ, which signaled the morning mass. Persons were passing in and out of the great portale, as they entered and retired from their matin worship.

Our hero paused at the door, undecided what to do. His first impulse was to seek out the Gray monk, who seemed to be at the bottom of the conspiriacy, and arrest him. But he had too high a reverence for religion to interrupt the worship within, where he supposed him to be. He was about to preced to the house of Senorial Cos, where he had left Leols, when his giance $5.50. Inquire 114 Essex st. nl 3*113 the opposite side of the vestibule, with her large black eyes fixed intently upon him, He recognized her at once, as the servant who had admitted Leela at the Senorita's house. He beckoned to her, and she slowly approached it a careless way, so as not to attract the attention

"The Senor Americano comes to seek the lady of his love," she said in a quick tone, as she sought the bas relief of a column.

"I do; tell me of her!" exclaimed Travis. "You are too late," she replied. "Too late !" he echoed almost wildly. "O say not so! where is she?" Many miles on her way to Camarge," said Vito. "She started at day-break." "To Camargo? Why goes she hence."

"She goes to the Convent St. Isabel, but she "What mean you?" "It is a plan of the Gray Monk's. The Guerlla chief, Señor Castillias, is to waylay the car-riage, and abduct the Señora Leola."

"Ah! and where is this priest-this "Benedicite, my son!" said a deep, impressive voice, near him. Travis turned, and confronted-the Gray

Vito fled. The young ranger started, as he beheld the object of his aversion, and drew his sword with the intention of plunging it through his body, when a gesture of patience from the Monk arrested his attention.

"Whom seek you, my son?" asked the Monk, in a calm tone, while his deep-set eyes seemed to rivet the very soul of the ranger. " I seek one whom you have foully wronged," he exclaimed. "And if you do not restore her to me, by Heaven! your priestly office shall not save you from my vengeance."

"Put up thy sword, Senor, lest you attract attention, and the populace will not brook to see one of their ministers endangered," said the priest, mildly. "No," he added, as Travis reluctantly obeyed, "Who is it you seek? What idle tale has that boyden been telling you?"

"No idle tale, Sir Monk. The Señora Leola di Violenta has been abducted, and sent towards Camargo, that she might fall into the hands of the bandit Castillias."

"You are mistaken, my son," said the monk, in his most insinuating tone. "The lady has chosen to retire to a convent, until the troubles and dangers of this war are over, and, as a minister of our Holy Mother Church, I could do no less than sanction her course."

"Dissembling hypocrite!" cried Travis, as he suddenly elevated his brows and dilated his eyes. "If I mistake not, we have met before, and I can see through your disguise. If it so turn out, you will regret the day you ever saw my face. For the present I leave you. In five minutes I will be on the road to Camargo with a troop of horse; and should I be so fortunate as to overtake the carriage, or fall in with Senor Edwardo Cast 'ias, I have an old account to settle with him, which will leave you one villain the less to assist in your nefarious schemes!"

"Maleditione!" exclaimed the monk, as the two Rangers turned away. "What can he know? Who can he be? May his horse stumble and break his neck; or, may he have his wish and fall into the hands of Castillias !"

To return to Leola. As the day wore on, the Senorita Cos became more intimate and familiar in her manner, until she at last revealed to her guest, with many apologies and regrets, that she had formed the idea of visiting some friends at a distance, while the city was in the hands of the Americans, and recommending her to retire to some convent for a time!

FOR THE PERSERVATION OF HUMAN LIFE.
PRIVATE CONSULTATION—DOCTOR HUNTER has for thirty years confined his attention to disease of a certain clase, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. The remedies are mild, and there is no interruption to business, or change of diet. Dr. HUNTER is in constant attendance, from I in the morning, until 10 at night, at his old office, 3 Division st. Charges moderate, and a cure guaranteed. Separate rooms, so that the patient sees no one but the Doctor himself. Inviolate secrecy in every instance. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases, when regular treatment, and all other remedies fall; cures without the disease in less than six hours; cures without the diseasing and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the diseasing and sickening effects of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint has the blood is sure to absorb, unless his remedy is used. This is what he claims for it, and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge, begin to appreciate it; for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists, and physicians, in regard to some plifful patient, who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. What human belugation, the property of an initial state in the not consulted by druggists, then the pretend that they make it.
